- New York University receives $1.34m grant to support online Arabic library

New York University Libraries announced that a grant of $1.34 million has been made by Arcadia-a charitable fund of Lisbet Rausing and Peter Baldwin on 21-08-2018 to support Arabic Collections Online (ACO). Arabic Collections Online (ACO) is a major project to create an open access, digital library of public-domain Arabic language content. It is a partnership between NYU New York and New York University Abu Dhabi (NYUAD) which began in 2013. ACO aims to digitize 23,000 volumes from NYU as well as partner institutions and make them accessible to the public on the ACO website. NYU expects to reach this goal by the end of 2020. NYU's Digital Library Technology Services developed and manages the online interface, a web portal accessible around the world. More than 8,785 volumes have already been posted on the site which covers above 5,600 subjects. Thousands of subjects are covered by the books in fiction, poetry, literature, criticism, culture and society, economics, history, law, biography, and Arabic language and grammar. ACO ensures that their content is saved digitally for future generations as they are very old material and many of the older books are rare or fragile, and nearly all are out of print. - OCLC collaborates with new partner in Sweden

OCLC has a new partnership with Bibliotekscentrum Sverige AB in order to deliver its flagship services to Swedish academic libraries, WorldShare Management Services (WMS) and WorldShare e-Services. Bibliotekscentrum Sverige AB is a leading provider of library software in Sweden. In addition of these OCLC services, it will also strengthen and complement the portfolio of solutions that it already delivers to the Swedish market. The phased roll-out of these services globally has been a key to the success of WMS. Henrik Hagelberg, Managing Director, at Bibliotekscentrum Sverige AB, said "Every country has its own unique attributes in terms of library operations and before embarking on offering these services in Sweden, it was vital that OCLC understood those characteristics. By partnering with us, OCLC has secured a partner with the highest amount of expertise and knowledge of the region". Sharing data and workflows has resulted in far greater efficiencies for libraries, and we are keen to bring those benefits to Swedish libraries.
